Mark von Dahlen studied law at the Heinrich Heine University in Düsseldorf. After completing his studies with distinction in commercial and corporate law and working as a research assistant at an international commercial law firm during his studies, he developed a particular interest in private commercial law, especially private construction law.

During his subsequent legal clerkship in the district of the Higher Regional Court of Düsseldorf, Mark von Dahlen was able to deepen his interests and gain further professional experience by working for a medium-sized construction law firm and in the construction and real estate law team of a large development bank in the state of North Rhine-Westphalia. Mark von Dahlen successfully passed his second state examination in law in 2013.

Mark von Dahlen joined our team at the Düsseldorf office of Leinemann Partner Rechtsanwälte in January 2014. His area of practice includes private construction law in the field of construction-related legal advice, among other things in the context of complex infrastructure and major construction projects, including the judicial enforcement of corresponding client interests. He also advises on the award of public contracts, continuously supporting his clients in complex tenders for both construction and supply and services and successfully representing them before the public procurement tribunals. Mark von Dahlen also provides comprehensive advice on major international projects in construction and plant engineering law in English contract and negotiation language.

In addition to his work as a lawyer, Mark von Dahlen is also a speaker at seminars and in-house training courses on construction and public procurement law for our clients.

Handelsblatt lists Mark von Dahlen once again as one of the “Ones to Watch” in construction law in
