Richard Koch studied law at the University of Bayreuth, specialising in international law. He also completed an additional degree in technical sciences, which provided him with a basic education in engineering.

During his legal clerkship at the Higher Regional Court of Düsseldorf, Richard Koch focused on construction and real estate law. For the public law perspective, he chose a municipal legal office as his administrative station, where he also worked for the building authority. In the area of civil law, he worked for a renowned construction law firm in Cologne.

After successfully passing his second state examination in 2024, Richard Koch joined the Cologne team of Leinemann und Partner at the beginning of 2025 and specialises in advising on construction and architectural law. He has also worked in property management for several years.

Richard Koch is a member of the Cologne Bar Association. He is a member of the Committee on Construction and Architectural Law at the Cologne Bar Club. He is also a member of the Construction Law Working Group of the German Bar Association (ARGE) and a member of the German Society for Construction Law.
